

2019 Lewiston Cereal School Agenda
Ketch-Pen, Lewiston, ID
Wednesday, January 23, 2019

8:00 AM — Sign-in & Refreshments

8:15 AM — Welcome & Introductions

8:20 AM — Idaho Wheat Commission

Executive Director Blaine Jacobson will provide an update on current issues and markets for wheat.

8:40 AM — Cereal and Cool Season Pulse Variety and Disease Update Variety performance of cereals and grain legumes will be discussed for 2018 cropping systems and conditions. A disease update will include identification and treatment for physiological leaf spot of wheat. Kurt Schroeder, University of Idaho Cropping Systems Agronomist

9:20 AM — Grassy and broadleaf weed control in cereals and legumes

Update on chemical weed control in wheat, peas, garbanzo beans, lentils, and canola. Focus will be on the following new herbicides: Osprey Xtra, Talinor and Quelex. Target weeds will include Italian ryegrass, downy brome, rattail fescue, mayweed chamomile, prickly lettuce and common lambsquarter. She will also highlight grass herbicide resistance in our region in Italian ryegrass, downy brome, interrupted windgrass and wild oat. Traci Rauch, University of Idaho Support Scientist

10:00 AM — Break

10:15 AM — Idaho Barley Commission

Meet Laura Wilder, our new Executive Director, who will provide an update on current issues and markets for barley.

10:35 AM — Weed, Insect and Disease Control in Canola

Update on integrated control of weeds, insects and diseases in canola production, including a discussion of disease management for blackleg. Canola variety trial results will be briefly discussed as well. Jim Davis, University of Idaho Research Scientist, Canola, Rapeseed and Mustard Program

11:15 AM — Projected Net Returns by Rotation: Updates for 2019

Calculate your net returns per acre by crop as well as on a rotational basis using these cost calculators in Excel. Given the low returns for many rotational crops, you might want to use a soil-building cover crop. Kate Painter, UI Extension, Boundary County.

Lunch following program — Sponsored by Idaho Barley and Idaho Wheat Commissions
